

No doubt the listing of the ratepayers of 1872 in the manner which the reader will find contained within these pages, could have been appropriate for the times. The listing is roughly alphabetical, and contained within the alphabetical listing, it is further divided, firstly those within the North Ward, secondly those living in the Centre Ward and then the inhabitants of the South Ward. In those days, when it is assumed that everybody knew where everybody lived, detailed identification of the location of the various huts and houses, shops and industries was not considered to be necessary, yet the Rate Book detailed fairly accurately the allotments and sections that in 1872 were not at the time built upon.

The compilers of the Rate Books were in no way forecasting that researchers one hundred or more years on would want to know in detail where individual people lived, the accurate location of the shops, and even more importantly the nature of those shops and what they sold. For those who wish to find such information in a manner more easily determined, the reader may wish to examine the companion set of sheets which give exactly the same information (slightly more modified) but arranged in the numerical order of the Assessment Numbers and not alphabetical. For Sections 1,2,3 etc., the starting point for each section is the South-East corner. For example, Assessment No 1 is the now Mulwaree Private Hotel, No. 2 is adjacent and so on. The idea is to go round the block in an anti-clockwise direction; i.e. along Sloane St, then turn the corner into Verner St, then Auburn St, finally completing the circuit in Clinton St. In Section 2, the same procedure is adopted, Assessment No. 34 being on the south-east corner, where one again proceeds anti-clockwise. After a while, identification becomes more blurred, for once one leaves the principal business area (Section 8) no indication except for street names is given. Occasionally the location of an Hotel is of some help.

Goulburn in 1872 must have given the impression of a frontier town with so many wooden constructions mingled among the better-constructed brick houses and shops. Listed among these pages will be found 37 slab huts, 26 slabhouses /cottages, 58 huts, 5 tanneries, 4 brickyards, 9 blacksmiths, 4 saddlers, 3 slaughteryards, not to mention 24 hotels. With so many constructions using wood as the raw material, properties that were fenced, wood to fire the brick kilns, wood for domestic fuel, the local forests suffered great destruction.

E. T. Cross
September, 1991.
